

WILDS Announces USPS Inspector General to Receive Megan J. Brennan Award for Excellence

Washington, DC — December 15, 2022 — Women in Logistics and Delivery Services (WILDS) announced today it will present the second annual Megan J. Brennan Award for Excellence to Tammy Whitcomb Hull, Inspector General, United States Postal Service, at a WILDS luncheon meeting to be held on February 2, 2023.

“During my tenure as Postmaster General, I appreciated the excellent working relationship that Tammy and I maintained,” said Megan Brennan of Ms. Whitcomb Hull’s selection. “Tammy always remained focused on the statutory responsibility of her organization to improve the economy, efficiency, and effectiveness of Postal Service programs, but in fulfilling her important role she also demonstrated a willingness to listen to alternative perspectives and to consider the broader context in our frequent discussions. Her approach invariably led to better results that strengthened the Postal Service for all stakeholders.”

Prior to her retirement from the Postal Service in June of 2020, Megan J. Brennan, the seventy-fourth Postmaster General of the United States, and the only woman to hold that office, was approached by WILDS, about creating an award for an individual who embodies the leadership traits she so well demonstrated during her tenure. Studies show that women bring a unique value to leadership teams and corporate boards, resulting in better effectiveness and performance. Megan J. Brennan demonstrated those results during her tenure and served as a role model for these qualities.

The Award Criteria are:

- Appreciation for the employees of an organization – people on the front lines.
- Ability to work collaboratively.
- Ability to look at problems and opportunities holistically.

“Tammy Whitcomb Hull is an outstanding leader of a multi-faceted organization,” says former Postal Regulatory Commission Chair, and WILDS co-founder Ruth Goldway. “I had the pleasure and privilege of working with Tammy from the time she was Assistant Inspector General for Audit through her steady rise to become Inspector General. Under her leadership, the IG has provided the highest level of technical analyses and challenged the industry by issuing thought-provoking research. Tammy has demonstrated remarkable resolve and assurance during times of great changes in postal technology, USPS management and legislation. Through it all, she has offered mentorship to others — especially young women — helping them to succeed just as she has. Megan worked well with Tammy, and I know she will be pleased and proud that WILDS is honoring Tammy this year.”

More information about the event and the WILDS organization can be found at: www.shedelivers.org

About WILDS

WILDS is a nonprofit organization created to promote women’s leadership in the postal, delivery and logistics industries and to address the challenges women and minorities regularly face in these industries. It has been known as an organization that “fights above its weight” in Washington and the logistics industry, being comprised of leaders from across the spectrum of government and the private sector with a common goal of building bridges across interest groups.

Media Contact: WILDS Chair – Shoshana Grove
Shoshana.grove@aol.com